Any member of TIDA, or their organization, firm, subsidiary, affiliate or related business may not represent, consult for or testify on behalf of plaintiffs in a personal injury case against a TIDA industry member or an insured of a TIDA industry member. If any firm or organization has even one individual who violates this provision, the entire firm or organization and all current TIDA members from that firm or organization will have their membership revoked. If the case is dropped or resolved after TIDA membership has been revoked, re-application to TIDA by all those removed will be required. (Claims for contribution, indemnity, property damage and cargo damage are not affected by this provision.)

Attorneys in private practice who wish to join TIDA must submit an Attorney application for membership. Only attorneys who regularly defend trucking companies or companies affiliated with the trucking industry and whose law firm does not regularly represent personal injury plaintiffs against the trucking industry are eligible for membership.
